

ATTENTION SCOTCH-IRISH MEN AND WOMEN

WHO ARE INTERESTED IN SCOTCH-IRISH HISTORY AND FAMILY ROOTS?

Permit me to introduce myself. My name is Michael Roe. I am a teacher at Seattle Pacific University and a research fellow at the University of Ulster in Northern Ireland. I am also Scotch-Irish. My family has Clan Crawford roots in Scotland, lived in County Armagh, Ireland, and immigrated to Philadelphia in the middle 1800's.

For the past seven years or so, I have been doing research on present-day Scotch-Irish, and I am currently beginning the third in a series of studies. The first two were published in the Journal of Scotch-Irish Studies, and their references are below.

This new study is designed to "listen" to personal and family stories. I am looking for men and women, 18 years of age or older, to participate who are (1) of Scotch-Irish ancestry, (2) consider themselves to be Scotch-Irish, (3) are interested in their own Scotch-Irish history and family stories, and (4) are willing to describe their experiences - to be storytellers in fine Scotch-Irish tradition.

If you are interested in participating, I will be very pleased to discuss this study in further detail with you. (Also, if you took part in an earlier study of mine, you are still eligible to participate in this new one.)

Please contact me at the email address, mailing address or phone number below.

Thank you. Michael

Michael D. Roe, PhD.
Professor of Psychology
Dean, School of Psychology, Family and Community
Seattle Pacific University
Seattle, WA 98119 U.S.A.
Phone: (206) 281-2252
Fax: (206) 281-2695

IRB# 070802009. Exp. Date: 30 July 08

1. Roe, M.D., & Brown, J.N. (2004). Characteristics and attitudes of 21st Century Scotch-Irish: Findings from representative national surveys. Journal of Scotch-Irish Studies, 2(1), 13-33.
2. Roe, M.D., & Dunlap, S. (2002). Contemporary Scotch-Irish social identities and attitudes toward The Troubles in Northern Ireland. Journal of Scotch-Irish Studies, 1(3), 12-36.